

Presentation

The Department of Crop and Forest Science specializes, within the field of plant production, in agronomy, biology, plant biotechnology, integrated pest management, ecology, genetics, plant breeding and plant pathology. Regarding the field of forestry, the Department specializes in forest fires, range management and silviculture. In addition to this, some of the Department's professors have expertise in experimental design and data analysis for agricultural and forestry research.

The Department is staffed by 42 professors and researchers and 11 administrative and services personnel. Currently there are 21 PhD students.

Department of Crop and Forest Science. 2009